Office Memorandum • UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT

TO : Mr. Tolson ✓

DATE: February 19, 1953

FROM : E. R. Clayton

SUBJECT: CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE AGENCY

There is attached for your information a tabulation showing a comparison between the Central Intelligence Agency and the Bureau insofar as appropriation, personnel, super grades, and key positions are concerned.

In addition to the top positions in the CIA listed on the attachment, there are eight Assistant Directors in grade GS-17 with minimum salaries of $13,000.00 annually; nine other executive positions, all in Washington, D. C., carrying minimum salaries of $13,000.00 annually; and at least ten positions in their foreign services with minimum salaries of $13,000.00 annually.

The CIA have 130 super grade positions; FBI has 29. However, we have been unable to definitely determine the exact number of grade GS-16 positions, $12,000.00, and GS-17 positions, $13,000.00, whereas we are positive they have only four grade GS-18 positions, $14,800.00 in CIA.

This information was obtained piece-meal by Supervisor S. J. Papich during his regular contacts with the various officials of the CIA. As additional information becomes available, you will be advised accordingly.

Re: Central Intelligence Agency

The GS-17 grades described above apply to the Directors or Chiefs of the divisions as set forth. It will be noted that in some of the divisions the Director or the Chief has assistants who are in GS-17. This is particularly true in the division described as Foreign Intelligence. The grade 16 jobs are scattered as indicated. Individuals receiving GS-16 are generally Administrative Assistants.

The above information was compiled as a result of contacts which the Liaison Agent has had with individuals who are familiar with salary grades in their respective divisions. Continuing efforts will be made to obtain additional data regarding the CIA salaries.

As you know, General Cabell was nominated to serve as Deputy Director of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA). His official assumption of duties was held up pending the passage of a bill by the Senate. On March 18, 1953, it was announced that the Senate unanimously approved legislation permitting the appointment of a Deputy Director of the CIA from military ranks. Such an appointee would continue to draw military pay, to which he was entitled in the armed services, but would be free from any military command, functions, or control. The bill provides that he would be paid by CIA a sum representing the difference between his military pay and the salary established for Deputy Director of the agency. As of March 23, 1953, General Cabell had not been confirmed as Deputy Director. This will take a few more days.

As you know, Cabell has been cooperative and friendly with the Bureau. He already has commented to the Liaison Agent that he personally desired to maintain a close and friendly relationship with the Bureau. The Liaison Agent advised him that he could always expect the Bureau to cooperate and that his comments were very much appreciated.

TO : THE DIRECTOR

FROM : D. M. LADD

SUBJECT: ALLEN W. DULLES
DIRECTOR, CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE AGENCY

DATE: March 30, 1953

Reference is made to the attached clipping from the "Times-Herald" by Willard Edwards, dated March 20, 1953, captioned "Security Head, Dulles Clash Over Report."

On March 30, 1953, Liaison Agent Papich contacted Mr. Dulles and referred to the aforementioned article. Papich advised Dulles that the Bureau had received an unconfirmed report to the effect that an investigation was in process to establish who, in the State Department, leaked information to Edwards of the "Times-Herald." Dulles was further informed by Papich that it was rumored that the CIA was conducting the investigation.

Dulles reacted immediately and almost shouted that if any CIA personnel was involved in such "dirty" operations he would immediately discharge the individual or individuals involved. He emphatically stated that if the Bureau had any evidence whatsoever indicating that CIA was engaged in such an inquiry or investigation, he would appreciate receiving the information so that he could take the necessary disciplinary action. He advised that he was having enough troubles without getting involved in the "Bohlen affair." He stated, "I can assure you I don't want any part of that thing." He requested that he be informed immediately if the Bureau received any further reports implicating the CIA in the investigation which allegedly had been initiated.

OBSERVATION:

There was no evidence of evasiveness on the part of Dulles. Attention is directed to the possibility that an employee or employees of CIA have independently done some "snooping" without Dulles' knowledge and on the basis of an informal request from somebody in the State Department, possibly General Smith.

SECURITY HEAD, DULLES CLASH OVER REPORT

President Steps In; Quiz Put Off

BY WILLARD EDWARDS

A battle raged behind the scenes at the White House, the State department and Capitol Hill yesterday over new developments affecting the nomination of Charles E. Bohlen as ambassador to Moscow.

Involved in the controversy were President Eisenhower, State Secretary Dulles and the State department's new security chief, R. W. Scott McLeod. Heated words were exchanged between Dulles and McLeod in a row over interpretation of an FBI report on Bohlen. Mr. Eisenhower sought to pacify his two subordinates after McLeod threatened, at one point, to resign.

Frantic efforts were being made by some G.O.P. leaders last night to hush up the whole affair. Its repercussions, it was said, might seriously affect Secretary Dulles' future relations with Congress.

White House Intervenes

Holding a key role in the affair was Sen. McCarthy of Wisconsin, chairman of the Senate investigations committee, who had announced in the morning that McLeod would be interrogated in executive session at 2 p.m. "on a matter of extreme importance." McCarthy firmly refused to comment on the nature of the questioning or to discuss any phases of the situation.

McLeod, after a White House interview with the President, did not show up for the hearing and it was called off. Meanwhile, the services of Vice President Nixon were enlisted as an intermediary. McCarthy was under tremendous pressure not to summon the angry McLeod. It was reported that he would insist upon questioning McLeod today.

The Senate foreign relations committee Wednesday unanimously approved the nomination of Bohlen after Dulles had spent four hours in closed session defending the appointment and describing the veteran diplomat as "the best available person we could think of."

Debate on the nomination is scheduled for next Monday in the Senate. Senators Bridges (R) of New Hampshire and McCarthy have announced they will oppose the selection of Bohlen. Sen. Ferguson (R) of Michigan, a committee member who voted for Bohlen, reserved the right to change his mind if the floor debate develops any new facts.

Summary Not Shown

Yesterday's sizzling exchanges centered on Dulles' version of a lengthy FBI report on Bohlen, the first ever made in his 24-year career. Dulles did not show the committee a summary of the report, but conveyed his own interpretation, which was said to have conflicted sharply with that reached by security chief McLeod.

McLeod, a former FBI man, took his new post several weeks ago and embarked on a swift clean-up which resulted in the firing of eight homosexuals from the State department as security risks.

Irate at Dulles' differing conclusions on the Bohlen report, McLeod was said to have faced the secretary in a heated encounter. McLeod's threat to resign at one point was said to have been answered by Dulles' ultimatum that he did not intend to abdicate his authority as State secretary to a security officer.

Put in False Light

One of the reported points of contention between Dulles and McLeod was the implication given the Senate committee that the security officer agreed with Dulles' "clearance" of Bohlen.

President Eisenhower was 'presumably not informed of the controversy when he held a press conference yesterday. A reporter asked him to comment on McCarthy's comment that it would be a mistake if the President did not withdraw the Bohlen nomination.

Mr. Eisenhower replied that he had had a full report on Bohlen from Dulles and considered him thoroughly trained in State department functions and as familiar with Russia as anyone available. It was a fine appointment, he added, and even if it proved to be a wrong appointment, it had been based strictly on merit.

McLeod arrived at the White House for a "showdown" after the press conference.

SECURITY HEAD, DULLES CLASH OVER REPORT

President Steps In; Quiz Put Off

BY WILLARD EDWARDS

A battle raged behind the scenes at the White House, the State department and Capitol Hill yesterday over new developments affecting the nomination of Charles E. Bohlen as ambassador to Moscow.

Involved in the controversy were President Eisenhower, State Secretary Dulles and the State department's new security chief, R. W. Scott McLeod. Heated words were exchanged between Dulles and McLeod in a row over interpretation of an FBI report on Bohlen. Mr. Eisenhower sought to pacify his two subordinates after McLeod threatened, at one point, to resign.

Frantic efforts were being made by some G.O.P. leaders last night to hush up the whole affair. Its repercussions, it was said, might seriously affect Secretary Dulles' future relations with Congress.

White House Intervenes

Holding a key role in the affair was Sen. McCarthy of Wisconsin, chairman of the Senate investigations committee, who had announced in the morning that McLeod would be interrogated in executive session at 2 p.m. "on a matter of extreme importance." McCarthy firmly refused to comment on the nature of the questioning or to discuss any phases of the situation.

AFL Sponsors Anti-Red Spy Ring in Berlin

By ART NOYES

(Special Correspondent of THE NEWS)
Frankfurt, March 15.—The American Federation of Labor is sponsoring a spy organization in Berlin, it was disclosed here today.

The AFL transmits approximately $10,000 a month to the U. S. Central Intelligence Agency, which in turn passes the money on to a group called the Kampfgruppe (combat group).

The Kampfgruppe has an overt information section whose function is to collect all facts concerning Russian concentration camps. It also has a top-secret spy section, whose operations are known only to U. S. Intelligence.

This is the first known instance of an American organization co-operating with the Government in the sponsorship of intelligence work, although the privately-sponsored

Constantine Brown:

Too Much Cloak and Dagger?

Congress, Ready With the Spotlights; Wonders
If Overlapping Shadows Make Costly Shade

All American intelligence agencies will soon be sharply scrutinized by the Appropriations Committees of both houses of Congress.

The lawmakers feel strongly that this country is spending too much money on intelligence for the results it is obtaining.

The following are at present engaged in intelligence: The Central Intelligence Agency, an independent organization responsible directly to the President of the United States; the State Department intelligence division, responsible to the Secretary of State; the Office of Naval Intelligence, the G-2 or intelligence branch of the Army Department, and finally the Air Force intelligence.

Our legislators feel strongly that there must be much overlapping and useless expenditure in the activities of these five separate groups. It is hard to justify, for instance, the State Department having some 500 persons engaged in actual intelligence work when that Government agency has free access to everything the CIA gathers in regard to political moves abroad.

There may have been a time, some years ago before the CIA was organized, when there could have been some excuse to have State Department agents collecting secret information. Reports on military matters are vital to the policymakers in that department for the formulation of America's foreign policies.

But these can be had at present from the Central Intelligence or in the event that some specialized information such as the exact military, naval or air strength of foreign countries is needed, the G-2, the ONI or the Air Force intelligence could prepare the necessary data.

A small and competent group of officials who can evaluate this intelligence from the political point of view seems to be all that the State Department needs. Our foreign missions abroad, whose main job has been to observe and report, provide all the diplomatic intelligence which the Secretary of State and his assistants can possibly need.

The military, air and naval attaches abroad are supposed to send to the Pentagon information pertaining to strictly military problems. In this task they are greatly helped by the fact that we have a full army in Germany with its own intelligence services on the borders of the satellite countries while the American staff officers at SHAPE can provide the armed services with the necessary data on the strength and capabilities of friendly military forces.

The American military mission on Formosa has at its disposal the entire intelligence service of the Nationalist Chinese on that island, but what is vitally important, it obtains from these sources reliable information from the Nationalist underground on the Chinese mainland.

The amount of money required by the intelligence of three service branches is undisclosed for the time being. But, according to some Congressmen, it can stand a good deal of trimming. The chief interest of the service representatives should be centered, the Congressmen say, not on the old-type intelligence gathering but principally on technical information.

The CIA is, of course, by far the most expensive intelligence agency we have had in the history of the country. So far the results obtained by that organization do not correspond to the vast expenditures.

But there is a strong feeling in the Senate and House that under a more aggressive leadership than in the past this relatively young agency—which began to function only six years ago—might be worth the sums expended.

Legislators who have been in close contact with the CIA believe that there is much dead wood in the organization which should be eliminated and it contains too many "pals" of men with influence in the Government.

The new civilian director of CIA, Allen Dulles, is likely to be given a vote of confidence for the time being and allowed to show what he can do within the next 12 months. In order to receive the full confidence of the men who hold the Nation's purse strings, Mr. Dulles will have to trim much of the fat in his organization.

[redacted] Panagra Airline, located at 135 E. 42nd St., NYC, was interviewed by the writer on 3/31/53. He was apprised of the fact a previous contact had been made with his office regarding the use of envelopes marked "FBI" for the transmittal of manifests between Lima, Peru, and the Republic of Panama. He was further advised that though officials in his Lima office may have been notified regarding the stopping of this practice, they had not in fact, complied and were continuing to engage in this practice.

b7D

[redacted] stated that the matter had not come to his personal attention but that he would take immediate steps to put an end to the misuse of envelopes which might appear to be designated for the FBI. At this point, he placed a person-to-person call with one of his officials at Miami Beach, Florida, during which call this practice was brought to the attention of the Miami Office and the order given to communicate with Lima, Peru, regarding the matter and its immediate curtailment.

Allen Dulles of the 'Silent Service'

Central Intelligence Agency's first civilian Director is steeped in the ticklish skills of the spy and counter-spy.

By CABELL PHILLIPS

WASHINGTON.

THE job of determining what is going on inside Russia—a fact of critical importance to this country as mysterious moves take place behind the red-brick walls of the Kremlin—is in the hands of America's "silent service." That organization is the Central Intelligence Agency, whose business is collecting every shred of fact, rumor and speculation we can lay our hands on. Such intelligence comes into C. I. A.'s unpretentious Washington headquarters these days in countless trickles and dribbles from countless sources. It is the task of the C. I. A. to sort out these fragments and reassemble them into an intelligible and coherent picture.

The man who directs the job, Allen Welsh Dulles, younger brother of the Secretary of State, is thoroughly steeped in both the cloak-and-dagger and the striped-pants techniques necessary in this ticklish kind of work. Yet he looks neither like an undercover agent nor like a diplomat. Even in action he manages to preserve the composure as well as the look of the headmaster of an English boys' school. His buoyant friendliness even when the pressure is on, which it often is now, enhances the illusion.

A career man, Dulles is the first civilian to head our secret intelligence system. At 59 he is lithe and active, a little above average height and with a slight bookish stoop to the shoulders. He has a high intellectual forehead surmounted by a tidy thatch of sparse gray hair, and he wears a close cropped gray mustache. His clothes have the expensively casual look of Saville Row and his teeth are usually clenched around the stem of a thick briar pipe. His appearance and manner, in fact, are rather disarming in an office where virtually every desk drawer and wastebasket seems to be tagged with the stern reminder, "CLASSIFIED."

WHEN he is seen at his ease in the quiet elegance of his old house in Georgetown, (a few blocks away from that of his brother, Foster) there is no intimation that his head is packed with more explosively secret information than that of perhaps any other official in Washington. A man of cultured tastes and cosmopolitan interests, he is an animated conversationalist on almost any topic except the one he knows most about—the inner workings of the C. I. A. When the talk veers in that direction he adroitly changes the subject, or, failing, preserves a grim and disapproving silence.

The model for an effective and efficient secret intelligence system has always been the "silent service" of the British Foreign Office. Here the experience of some 300 years of continuous maneuvering in the devious and shadowy bypaths of international diplomacy has developed a background of high professional skill and a career tradition of unsurpassed loyalty.

It was not until the outbreak of World War II that this country began some feverish and elaborate improvisations to create a strategic intelligence system as contrasted with the conventional but outmoded "battlefront" intelligence of Army G-2 and the Navy's O. N. I. And it was not until 1947 that the undertaking was given formal and permanent status when the C. I. A. was created under the National Security Act. But in those intervening five years the C. I. A. which Allen Dulles now runs has achieved a place in world esteem where it commands the respect of even the British, whose system it has unblushingly adapted in so many important respects.

Like its mentor and counterpart, the C. I. A. is a central clearinghouse for the foreign intelligence collected by other agencies of the Government—the State Department, the Army, Navy and Air Force, and so forth. Moreover, it has its own system of collection to fill in the gaps; most of it "white," which is to say conventional, but some of it "black," which may be as unconventional as the urgency of the particular situation requires. As an agency of the National Security Council, it is senior in the field of intelligence to every other branch of government and its reports, therefore, have unmistakable force and authority.

C. I. A. is certainly the biggest (if not universally recognized as the best) national intelligence service in the world. Hard facts about it are concealed under the inevitable cloak of secrecy but it is believed to have between 10,000 and 15,000 people on its payroll here and abroad. Its central headquarters spread over some thirty buildings here in Washington (none of which is so identified by the familiar government building signs) and there are branches in every important city in this country and throughout the world, at least outside the confines of the Iron Curtain. The size of its annual appropriation is secret and unpublished in the usual budgetary documents.

ALARGE part of C. I. A.'s work is comparable to—and little more so—than a library research project. Hundreds of researchers, young men and women with college degrees and usually with some language, geographic, ethnic or technical specialty, pore over bales of newspapers, magazines, government reports, advertising circulars and similar material.

They interview immigrants and travelers and business men with connections in foreign countries. They haunt libraries, museums, and even art galleries. One large unit monitors radio broadcasts both here and in foreign lands.

The C. I. A. produces regular and special intelligence estimates for the President and the chiefs of agencies directly concerned with foreign affairs and internal security. But its principal "consumer" is its parent organization, the National Security Council, where its reports become the principal ingredient in the formulation of high-level national policy. The C. I. A. Director participates regularly in all N. S. C. deliberations. Although he is not a statutory member of that body, his influence upon its decisions scarcely is exceeded by any of those who are.

ALLEN DULLES got into the spy business almost as soon as he got out of Princeton. It was in 1916, when, as a 23-year-old functionary in the United States Embassy at Vienna, he was given the job of making contact with the dissident forces in Austria who were trying to upset that country's World War entente with Germany. His career reached a dramatic climax almost thirty years later when, as chief of the Office of Strategic Services in Switzerland, he subverted Hitler's generals in northern Italy into surrendering (Continued on Page 53) tors and a hunting ground for spies and counter-spies. It was the beginning and the end of the trail for a stealthy traffic of secret couriers working back and forth across the borders of Germany, France, Italy and the Balkans.

ONE visitor whom Dulles received at his apartment late one night, after much devious negotiation through intermediaries, was one "George." A squat, bald-headed, stubbornly belligerent man, he was a minor official in the German Foreign Office. In his official capacity he had access to most of the secret communications that flowed into Berlin from the far-flung outposts of the Nazi espionage network. He hated the Nazis with a consuming passion and saw their destruction as the only means of saving his beloved fatherland from ruin. He wanted to establish a reliable contact with the Allies and do what he could to shorten the war by hastening the Nazis' defeat.

During the next two years "George" directed a stream of more than 2,000 documents from the innermost sanctum of the Foreign Office across the desk of the American spy chief in Bern.

"George" probably was the most valuable and the most prolific source of secret intelligence out of Germany that the Allies had during the entire war. He told of the location of a secret radio transmitter in the German Embassy in Dublin that was used to direct submarine raids on Allied shipping. He disclosed elaborate plans to trap a large troop convoy about to sail from New York in time for American officials to re-route the ships. He warned of General Franco's preparations to smuggle large quantities of badly needed tungsten to German war plants. And it was he who uncovered the sinister Cicero Diello, the Nazi spy who was valet to the British Ambassador at Ankara.

ALMOST unknown to the American high command in the early years of the war was the existence of a daringly determined underground movement within Nazi Germany itself. It was composed largely of liberals and intellectuals, but it had also attracted a significant cadre of generals of the Wehrmacht and high civilian officials of the Third Reich.

Dulles established liaison with the leaders of "Breakers" (the code name by which the underground was known in secret Allied communications) through Hans Bernd Gisevius in the early months of 1943. Gisevius was ostensibly a German vice consul in Zurich. In reality he was a member of the Abwehr, the German counter-intelligence service, and more importantly still, he was a ringleader in the conspiracy to assassinate Hitler.

Dulles kept Washington fully informed of the progress of "Breakers." The conspirators sought desperately for some reassurance that if the German people themselves did away with Hitler and Nazism the Allies would consent to terms less stringent than "unconditional surrender," which meant surrender to the Russians as well.

Dulles urged on his superiors some concessions to this goal. He believed there was a real prospect that the plotters could carry through their audacious scheme to do away with Hitler and seize control of the army and the Government in one furious, desperate stroke. That this reassurance was never given may have contributed, he now believes, to the failure of the conspiracy.

A BOMB was exploded at Hitler's feet in his secret headquarters in East Prussia on July 20, 1944. Der Fuehrer was seriously wounded, but he struggled alive from the wreckage of the building. This mischance threw other elements of the plot into confusion—the communications centers were never seized, and the Wehrmacht elements which were poised to take over vital Government centers in Berlin were held in their barracks.

It was the knowledge and contacts gained through "Breakers" which enabled Dulles, late in 1944, to establish secret channels into the High Command of the German forces stubbornly retreating before the United States Third Army up the Italian boot. And it was to Dulles' agents (who had established themselves with secret radio transmitter in Milan) that the Germans—in April, 1945—gave the word they were ready to meet with Allied commanders to arrange capitulation.

Allen Dulles calls at the White House to report on intelligence.

SUBJECT: ALLEN W. DULLES
Director, CIA,

Your attention is directed to the attached article captioned "Allen Dulles of the 'Silent Service'" which appeared in the "New York Times," March 29, 1953.

The article, written by Cabell Phillips, described D as the Washington correspondent for the "Times" Sunday Department, is in every way complimentary to Dulles. Although he has only been the Director of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) for a few weeks, the author states, "Under his direction CIA has achieved world esteem." The following additional observations are called to your attention:

1. Phillips pointed out that the model for an effective and efficient secret intelligence system has always been the "silent service" of the British Foreign Office.

2. He states CIA is certainly "the biggest (if not universally recognized as the best) national intelligence service in the world." He indicates CIA has between 10,000 and 15,000 people on its payroll here and abroad. Is you know CIA has always closely guarded such information.

3. Much of the article deals with Dulles' OSS operations in Switzerland.

You will recall that on March 28, 1952, Bureau representatives attended a briefing of the operations of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA). CIA has now advised that another briefing is scheduled for April 7, 1953, and that agency has invited the Bureau to attend. The CIA has requested the names of Bureau personnel who might be designated to attend the briefing.

Briefing held in March, 1952, proved to be valuable in that the Bureau was able to obtain considerable information concerning the administrative setup of the CIA. Additional data was developed concerning the nature of that agency's operations and objectives. It is believed that the briefing scheduled for April 7, 1953, should be of value to the Bureau particularly since the organization has a new Director. It is possible that the briefing will reflect some changes in the agency.

ACTION:

If you approve, I will attend the briefing with Inspector Keay and Liaison Agent Papich.

The Liaison Agent has developed the following information concerning recent administrative changes in the captioned agency:

GENERAL CHARLES PEARRE CABELL

General Cabell was sworn in today (4-23-53) as Deputy Director of Central Intelligence. You will recall that his confirmation was held up pending the passage of legislation which officially created a position of Deputy Director of Central Intelligence. As you know, General Cabell was friendly and cooperative with the Bureau while he was Director of Intelligence in the Air Force and while he was connected with the Joint Chiefs of Staff. By letter dated October 4, 1951, the Director expressed his best wishes to Cabell on his new assignment with the Joint Chiefs of Staff and thanked him for past cooperation.

LOFTUS E. BECKER

Becker has been a Deputy Director of Intelligence in the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) and in this capacity has been responsible for the supervision of various divisions which deal with research, analysis, and the preparation of intelligence estimates. He is leaving this post to resume his former connections with the New York law firm of Cahill, Gordon, Zachary, and Reindel. Becker very likely will represent the firm at Washington, D. C.

Becker has been friendly and cooperative with the Bureau.

ROBERT AMORY, JR.

Amory will succeed Becker as a Deputy Director. He is a former lawyer who has more recently been connected with the CIA, where he has primarily been concerned with economic intelligence matters and with the preparation of national intelligence estimates. The Bureau files are being reviewed concerning Amory and you will be furnished the results.

LYMAN B. KIRKPATRICK

As you know, Kirkpatrick recently returned to the CIA after being crippled from an attack of polio. Upon his return he was acting

SYNOPSIS:

Amory will succeed Loftus E. Becker as Deputy Director, Intelligence, Central Intelligence Agency (CIA). He is 38 years of age; graduate of Harvard law school, where he served as professor from October, 1946 to March, 1952. He served in U. S. Army during last war and came out as Lieutenant Colonel. Has been with CIA since March, 1952. He admitted membership in American Veterans Committee in 1946-1947 and stated he resigned, "because of anti-universal military training and anti-MacArthur bias of this organization." (This organization was target for Communist infiltration.) He also admitted subscribing to "National Guardian" to be aware of Communist Party line (This publication alleged to be pro-Stalin). His wife in 1946 or 1947 made small contribution (believed to be $3) to Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee; Amory indicated wife was ignorant of true composition of organization (cited by Attorney General).

Memo to Mr. Belmont

Re: Robert Amory, Jr.
Central Intelligence Agency

DETAILS:

Reference is made to my memorandum of April 23, 1953, captioned, "Central Intelligence Agency, Administrative Changes" wherein information was set forth indicating that the captioned individual was succeeding Loftus E. Becker as Deputy Director, Intelligence, Central Intelligence Agency. As set forth in the referenced memorandum, the Bureau files were being reviewed concerning Amory.

Referral/Consult

[REDACTED]
[REDACTED] Amory listed membership in the American Veterans Committee, Cambridge, Massachusetts, from 1946 to 1947. He stated that he resigned from this organization "because of anti-universal military training and anti-MacArthur bias of this organization." As you know, the American Veterans Committee was a target for Communist infiltration. This infiltration was reportedly successful in certain local chapters. In 1948 the organization adopted an anti-Communist stand. Amory also admitted that he was a subscriber to the "National Guardian" which he described as a "left-wing paper which I read merely to be aware of the Communist Party line and the extremists' views on current affairs. In no way do I support its editorial or news point of view." The California Committee on Un-American Activities described the "National Guardian" as a publication which, from its inception, was Stalinist in its staff, writers, management, and content. In his Personal History Statement Amory admitted that in 1946 or 1947 his wife made a small contribution (believed to be $3) to the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee. He explained that his wife made the contribution in ignorance of the "true composition" of the organization. He indicated that his wife was of the belief that the afore-mentioned organization assisted displaced persons. The Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee was cited as coming under the Purview of Executive Order 9835. (116-362245)

The Bureau received information from the Los Angeles Office by letter dated April 8, 1953, indicating that Mrs. Thomas M. Sawyers, nee Leonore Amory, of Ontario, California, had been involved in a bitter argument with Mrs. Gerene Appleby Harnish, publisher of the "Daily Report" a newspaper in Ontario, California. The Los Angeles letter indicated that Mrs. Sawyers was the sister of the captioned individual. Mrs. Harnish advised the Los Angeles Office that Mrs. Sawyers had stated to her that while she was at Vassar College she had been interested in the Spanish Revolution and that she had used Communist organizing tactics in fighting "American firsters." In response to a direct question concerning her philosophy Mrs. Sawyers allegedly stated to Mrs. Harnish that "being a liberal I am in sympathy with philosophical Communism, the Lenin type." She also allegedly stated, "My belief is from each according to his ability, to each according to his need." The information received from Los Angeles indicated that both Mrs. Harnish and Mrs. Sawyers had been active in the affairs of the Republican Party and they apparently did not get along.

Re: Robert Amory, Jr.
Central Intelligence Agency

The files reflect that Amory is a graduate of Harvard law school and he served as a professor at that institution from October, 1946, to March, 1952. He has been with the CIA since March, 1952. He served in the U. S. Army during the last war and came out as a Lieutenant Colonel.

The Bureau will not have occasion to have frequent dealings with Amory in his position as Deputy Director, Intelligence. Contacts with him might develop in connection with matters taken up in Intelligence Advisory Committee meetings. The Liaison Agent has met Amory, who leaves the impression of being rather officious. He has never manifested any particular friendliness toward the Bureau and in general is "cold" toward everybody, including his associates at CIA. It is the Liaison Agent's opinion that the Bureau should be circumspect in dealings with him.

Reference my memorandum dated April 16, 1953, in the above-captioned matter relating to our efforts to pin down rare instances wherein the obscene file in the FBI Laboratory had been viewed by outsiders. The Director stated, "I want to know more about these rare instances & who approved display of this material."

An unsuccessful check of Bureau files has been made to pin point those occasions when the file was viewed by outside persons. Since we lack specifics, to begin with and since the instances have been most infrequent, it has not been possible to find in writing in the files details of any visit together with necessary approval. Laboratory personnel recall during the past 2 years only the May, 1951, incident. They have no specific recollection of any other outsiders recently viewing the file.

b3

The only other recalled instance involved U. S. Attorney Malcolm E. Lafargue of Louisiana who in connection with an official investigation involving the interstate transportation of obscene matter was permitted subsequent to April 3, 1946, to see very limited material since it had a bearing on the case he handled. (62-53438-149) Laboratory and Investigative Division personnel do not recall who approved this viewing. Mr. Harbo has been advised of the Director's instructions that the obscene file should not be exhibited to anyone outside the Bureau except upon specific approval of you or the Director.

Reference my memorandum dated April 14, 1953, to you setting out some details of a visit to the FBI Laboratory on or about May 22, 1951, by CIA representatives, [redacted]

The Director stated on reference memorandum, "I assume the 'pornographic file or library' was not shown them. This should not be exhibited to any one outside unless specifically authorized by Tolson or myself."

A search of Bureau files fails to reflect information indicating that the CIA representatives viewed the obscene literature file during their visit to the Bureau. The administrative file of the obscene literature file (80-662) and the file in which is contained data relating to our dealings with CIA (62-80750) contain no identifiable information concerning this incident.

As pointed out in referenced memorandum, however, we received a request from CIA to have its representatives visit the Laboratory for the purpose of obtaining an over-all picture. Two men, [redacted] and [redacted] did come in on or about May 22, 1951. [redacted] initially scheduled to accompany [redacted] did not come to the Bureau that date. Supervisor O. H. Bartlett of the Civilian Liaison Unit, Domestic Intelligence Division, accompanied the men, in accordance with the Director's instructions, on their tour assisted by Dr. B. J. White of the Laboratory and Special Agent D. Norman Gray.

I am informed that in conformity with established policy, the men were shown through the Laboratory and did see certain carefully selected and limited material from the obscene literature file about which they inquired. [REDACTED]

The limited material the men did see was shown only after approval had been obtained for them to view what they did see. The men did not view the whole file, spent considerably less than a half-hour viewing material they apparently regarded as elementary. [redacted]

Memorandum for Mr. Tolson

RE: REQUEST BY CIA TO HAVE REPRESENTATIVES VISIT THE FBI LABORATORY

The Policy in the Laboratory with respect to the exhibiting of the obscene file to persons outside the Bureau has remained unchanged since May, 1951. The Laboratory never takes any outsider into the obscene room, Room 7608, on its own initiative or approval. Room 7608 is one of the two rooms in the Laboratory having special locks which FBI Laboratory keys do not fit. On those rare instances wherein material has been shown to outsiders, approval has always been obtained from another division. The obscene file is a most restricted file in the Laboratory.

Do I know more about these rare instances Mr. Harbo, Mr. Parsons and Mr. Bowles of the Laboratory have no specific recollection of this incident. Mr. Bartlett states the secure nature of the obscene file was certainly known to him at the time, we were also at the time dealing with CIA at arms length, and he recalls that approval for the men to see limited data had been obtained but he does not recall which official gave approval. Dr. White, who accompanied the two CIA representatives on tour, is now on leave in Texas and Special Agent D. Norman Gray, who handled the obscene literature room at the time, was transferred to the San Diego Office on 6-26-51. Dr. White and SA Gray have not been contacted regarding this matter. SA Gray, however, may recall the incident and by whom approval was given. No action necessary

Mr. Harbo has been advised of the Director's instructions that the obscene file should not be exhibited to anyone outside the Bureau except upon specific approval of you or the Director.

Be sure this is done

We are interested in learning what films are available in the general field of stenographic and clerical training. [REDACTED]

Central Intelligence Agency, has offered to make available their facilities to the Bureau. If we furnish him with a list of appropriate subject categories he can cause a machine search to be made through the hundreds and thousands of titles available and, as a result, can furnish us with a list of films relating to the categories in which we are interested. W

There is attached a blind memorandum setting out several titles under which such a search might be made. It will be appreciated if the liaison agent can make an appropriate request of CIA and furnish this division with the results of the search.

The column "Voice of Broadway" by Dorothy Kilgallen which appeared in the "Times Herald" Monday, May 18, 1953, stated "The CIA will conduct a sweeping investigation into the mysterious series of fires originating in naval ports and cities where naval installations are located. Sabotage is definitely suspected."

The Sabotage Desk has advised me that we are not aware of any series of incidents which could properly be described as "the mysterious series of fires originating in naval ports." There have been no recent fires of any consequence reported as possible sabotage insofar as naval installations are concerned. It will be recalled that there were some serious fires in British ports one of which recently destroyed the "Empress of Canada," a passenger ship in the harbor of Liverpool, England.

RECOMMENDATION

It is recommended that CIA be contacted through liaison to discreetly determine if CIA is conducting any investigation of any possible sabotage in the United States since this is a matter within the Bureau's jurisdiction.

Voice of Broadway

By Dorothy Kilgallen

Marilyn Maxwell's week-long visit in New York had romantic overtones. Besides her publicized activities, the glamorous blonde traveled 45 miles up-State to meet the family of Jerry Davis, the handsome screen writer, who's been her best beau for months. Chums consider the betrothal all but official.

When millionaire Huntington Hartford and his bride leave for California, this week they'll take a doctor with them on the train—just in case the stork tries to catch up with the Super-Chief.

The New York revival of "Porgy and Bess" has received tempting offers to tour the continent.

One of the major movie studios intends to hold out on all forms of 3-D. Considers it a fad and gives the new gimmicks a life span of 10 months.

Broadway's biggest blunderer: the wife of a top-flight film star is holding secret trysts with a famous millionaire sportsman.

The CIA will conduct a sweeping investigation into the mysterious series of fires originating in naval ports and cities where naval installations are located. Sabotage is definitely suspected.

Conti Condon, Stan Kenton's ace trumpeter, is honeymooning with Peggy Randall, a Wichita beauty contest winner, after a wedding at St. Patrick's.

as a waitress in the Champagne Gallery.

Cozy twosome at the Washington Square Inn: Jim Fuchs, the shotput star, and Evelyn McBride, the model.

Flash for the magazine publishing world: Eleanor Sternheim will be the new fiction editor at Colliers.

The tea industry is about to get under way with an intensive campaign to persuade waiters to ask diners, at the end of a meal: "Will you have tea or coffee?"

Wonder why Sugar Ray Robinson's bodyguard was turned down on a pistol permit request in Cleveland? (Come to think of it, wonder why Sugar Ray needs a bodyguard?)

Robert Coogan, kid brother of the famous Jackie, and better known around Hollywood as "the Blimp" (because there's 300 pounds of him) has fallen in love with starlet Janet McCormack. It proves he's really his brother's brother—because Janet is the sister of Anne McCormack, Jackie's third and most recent wife.

A multimillionaire South American is around London offering as high as $15,000 to anybody who can get him inside Westminster Abbey for the coronation ceremonies. Not a chance, of course.

Imagine glamorous Rita Hayworth with an unglamorous ailment like lumbago.

SUBJECT: REQUEST FOR TOUR OF BUREAU'S RECORDS SECTION

b3

[redacted] Liaison Representative, Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), has inquired if a tour of the Bureau's Records Section could be arranged for five CIA clerical employees and himself. The clerical employees are: [redacted]

[redacted] There is no derogatory information in Bureau files concerning these individuals or [redacted]

The afore-mentioned employees are assigned almost exclusively to matters of mutual interest to the Bureau and the CIA. [redacted] feels that the orientation derived from the tour will assist materially in the processing of Bureau requests at the CIA.

ACTION:

If you approve, the tour will be scheduled for 10 am, Thursday, May 28, 1953. The Liaison Agent can confirm arrangements with the CIA.
